2. Weddings on the Rise with Dogs!

Here Comes the ...Pup?

Winter is the time most couples plan ahead for spring nuptials. However; while you're busy deciding between Queen Anne's lace and freesia for your flowers and finger food or a sit down dinner for the reception, don't forget that furry little sidekick of yours.

More couples are opting to include their pets as part of the wedding party. Today, weddings including dogs are on the rise. While this may escalate Aunt Edna's blood pressure just a little, after the initial shock wears off, trust me that little fur-baby of yours will win over everyone's hearts. It is, in fact, considered socially acceptable today for your pets to be a part of the wedding.

While some couples choose the role of ring bearer for Fido or Fluffy, others have selected to have their furry companion as the Best Man/Maid of Honor or, in this case, Best Pup or Maid of Fur.

Many wedding planners now have the added task to find acceptable settings just so your furry friend can be part of the gala event. Pre-planning is the key here.

Attire for your furry friend is also a consideration for couples about to tie the knot. Some couples will find a black clip-on bow tie for male pets works well while a garter matching the wedding dress can adorn the necks of the females. However, there is a complete line of formal attire for pets if the couple should want to really go all out.

3. New Diet Drug Approved

Does Your Pooch Have a Paunch?

Is your Chihuahua chubby? Your Spaniel have a spare tire? If so, Pfizer Inc. received the green light from the FDA for a drug called Slentrol. With canine obesity on the rise, Slentrol can help in an overall weight management program along with a healthy diet and exercise.

The drug comes in liquid form. It decreases the absorption of fat along with providing your pet with a sensation of being full. As with any drug, there may be side affects such as: vomiting, loose stool or loss of appetite. Another side note; the drug is not for humans. To learn more about this new drug, contact your veterinarian or see the link below.

4. Saving Homeless Pets - Part II

Send a Rose and Save a Life

You may recall that we told you how you could help Petsmart Charities save lives by sending them your empty inkjet cartridges in our last issue. With Valentine's Day just around the corner, thoughts of flowers come to mind, so we thought we'd let you know of another way you can help homeless pets.

Teleflora has teamed up with Petsmart Charities. By dialing 800-965-2448 and using code DCOPET when you want to send flowers, a 10% donation will be made to Petsmart Charities to help save lives of homeless pets. So whether it's Valentine's Day, a get well bouquet, birthday or anniversary, your gift of flowers will help the pets!
